- Plutarch, the Greek philosopher

A group of three students from Class XII - Satakshi Sati, Avantika Mishra and Tulika Harshavardhan, along with their Teacher Escort, Mrs. Sandhya Mudgal participated in the prestigious Hugh Catchpole All India Inter School English Debate at Rashtriya Indian Military College (RIMC) Dehradun from 4th to 6th April 2024. - Participants need to control their speed if you fail to do so then your whole attempt is futile.
- A good debate may not be morally right rather the arguments should be well cemented and the debater should fortify himself against the opponents attack.
- To participate, to keep on playing, to keep on fighting is more important than winning.
- Debating challenges us beyond our comfort zones and everything matters - gestures, body language, speaking style etc.

Overall, it was a great learning platform for the participants to polish their skills.

Though laurels may have eluded us, the wealth of experiences garnered during our participation promises to be invaluable assets in our future endeavors in debating and quizzing.

Reflecting on our journey, we have distilled several key insights that shall serve as guiding principles in our pursuit of excellence:

- We learned that in the realm of debating, body language can wield significant influence, and even the slightest gesture can convey volumes.
- Effective debate hinges not only on the substance of arguments but also on the delivery. Adequate voice modulation and confident presentation are paramount for leaving a lasting impression.
- The rebuttal speech emerged as a critical juncture where a well-timed and impactful response can sway opinions and tilt the scales in one's favour.
- Our perception of debates evolved from mere verbal combat to a nuanced art form, where diverse perspectives converge in a harmonious symphony of intellect.
- Rather than resorting to verbal aggression, we realized the potency of channelling our assertiveness into the articulation of innovative ideas and compelling arguments.
- True mastery in speaking transcends mere knowledge; it is rooted in the passion and conviction with which one articulates their ideas.

In commemorating our collective efforts and achievements, we embark upon the next chapter of our journey, fortified with newfound wisdom and camaraderie.
