REPRODUCTIVE AND SEXUAL HEALTH AWARENESS IN ADOLESCENTS BY Dr. NAYANIKA

On 31st January 2025, a session on Reproductive and sexual health awareness for Adolescents was conducted for students of Classes VIII, IX, and X. Dr. Nayanika Gaur, a distinguished alumna of the school with MBBS and MS degrees in Obstetrics and Gynaecology, led the session. As an Infertility Specialist, she currently manages her own clinic, Kirti IVF. The interactive session provided valuable insights into adolescent health and well-being.

Dr. Nayanika commenced by defining "Reproductive Health," emphasizing the WHO definition that describes it as a state of complete physical, mental, and social well-being, not merely the absence of disease or infirmity in all matters related to the reproductive system. She highlighted the importance of understanding what is normal and not normal in reproductive and sexual health.

A key point of the session was the distinction between sex and sexuality. Dr. Nayanika emphasized that emotional stability is the cornerstone of healthy sexuality. She provided valuable insights on adolescence, which spans from 9 years of age to 24 sometimes, with teenagers being only a part of this group.

Addressing common concerns related to menstruation, Dr. Nayanika answered questions such as whether menstruation is normal or if it causes weakness. She creatively used the popular animated character Anna from the movie Frozen to explain the stages of worry during menstruation, making the discussion relatable and engaging for the audience.

She also provided insights into different menstrual hygiene products, with a focus on the sanitary pad, and briefly explained the roles of hormones like estrogen and progesterone. Furthermore, she discussed contraception and condom usage, stressing the importance of saying "No" at a young age and how abstinence is a safe choice to prevent AIDS/HIV.

Dr. Nayanika highlighted the importance of cervical cancer awareness and the availability of vaccines to prevent it. She concluded the session by answering questions from the audience and encouraging self-respect and body positivity, quoting Marilyn Monroe:

TO ALL THE GIRLS THAT THINK YOU'RE FAT
BECAUSE YOU'RE NOT A SIZE ZERO
YOU'RE THE BEAUTIFUL ONE
ITS SOCIETY WHO'S UGLY.

The session was highly informative and successfully fostered awareness and understanding among the students, empowering them with essential knowledge about reproductive and sexual health

Report on Teachers' Workshop: The Art of Connection

"A father gives a child an angry look and the child reckons, 'I've done something bad.' The father looks at the child with anger most of the time and the child reaches the conclusion, 'I am bad.'" – Dr. Shelja Sen

On the 22nd of February 2025, a transformative workshop titled “The Art of Connection” was conducted by Ms. Aashna Jain, School Counsellor, at RKKGPS. The session aimed to highlight the importance of building meaningful relationships between teachers and students to foster a supportive and encouraging learning environment.

The workshop commenced with an eye-opening activity where teachers role-played as students and educators, reading out common classroom scenarios. This engaging exercise shed light on the gap between teachers and students—the lack of awareness among teachers about students' backstories and, similarly, the students' limited understanding of their teachers' intentions.

Following this, the session explored the fundamental triggers that challenge teachers in maintaining composure when faced with difficult situations. By recognizing these triggers, teachers can work towards regulating their responses and fostering a more empathetic approach in their interactions.

A key focus of the workshop was on the impact of teacher communication on a student's self-esteem and confidence. The manner in which a teacher speaks can either uplift or demoralize a student, making it imperative to use positive, encouraging, and respectful language in classrooms.

Ms. Aashna then introduced the powerful mantra—“Connect Before Correct.” To emphasize this, she shared insights from a survey conducted within the school, which examined the foundation of connection and its significance. The survey findings highlighted why students form stronger connections with certain teachers on social, emotional, and transformational levels, differing across age groups from middle to high school. The session proceeded with a discussion on the most effective positive discipline strategies that teachers can implement through enhanced communication skills. These included:

- Practicing empathy and active listening
- Maintaining composure and using respectful language
- Publicly praising students while offering individual guidance in private
- Avoiding public humiliation
- Establishing and respecting healthy boundaries with students

The workshop concluded with an open discussion, where teachers shared their experiences, perspectives, and success stories. It was a moment of mutual agreement when Ms. Aashna stated, “When care is shown, connection prevails, and when connection prevails, positive change happens.” The workshop left a lasting impact on the participants, reinforcing the importance of connection in shaping a nurturing educational environment.

An inspiring and thought-provoking session 'Inculcate Values - Live with Pride' was conducted at RKK on 17th April 2025, by Dr Geeta Pareek , the founder of Honour Till foundation and Ms. Renu Vashisth, associated with Honour Till foundation.

Dr. Geeta Pareek started the session with the introduction of “The Honour Till” initiative — a unique movement inspired by Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam to reintroduce honesty and trust in our lives. A suggestion box was introduced under the activity ‘Mujhe bhi kuch kehna hai,’ which will be kept in school and will motivate students to anonymously write about their questions, problems, suggestions or thoughts so that they feel heard even without feeling uncomfortable. This initiative promotes self-service and honor-based payments, aiming to strengthen the social fabric with trust as its foundation. Students learned how small actions rooted in honesty can build strong, respectful communities.

Ms. Renu Vashisth explained about the acronym PRASANG stands for Positive, Responsible, Ambitious, Supportive, Abreast, Noble, and Generous. Each word represents a subtle energy centre, and the session highlighted how embodying these values can help individuals unblock their potential and live a more fulfilling life. Through vivid examples and clear guidance, students were encouraged to feel grounded, express compassion, unlock creativity, and act with purpose.

The session was an enriching experience, with guidance on practical steps that students can take to align their body, mind, and soul with higher values. It left the audience deeply reflective and motivated to practice these values not only in school but also in everyday life.
